

The Equity in Health Care Series Part One – “Health Equity”

A new, four-part series will feature engaging, insightful videos that dive deep into the heart of health equity. Each video is informative and motivational, offering practical insights to spark positive change. The first in the series, Health Equity, introduces key terms and explores the concept of health disparities, health inequities, and what health equity could look like in our society.

Future series topics will include anti-racism, implicit bias, and cultural humility. Together, these videos help viewers understand and tackle barriers to fair health care.

We Know, I Know: A Dance to the Medical Visit; Sexual and Reproductive Health for Indigenous Women

Keeping within the tradition of Native American approaches to health, this brochure introduces and illustrates how Indigenous women can engage in a collaborative conversation with their healthcare providers. This brochure includes information on Indian Health Services, reproductive and sexual health, healthy relationships, and patient support.
